Crowd gates done right: Best practices for cow comfort and welfare

Submitted by: Carolina Pinzón

Proper crowd gate functioning benefits both cows and dairy farm workers. For farm managers, effective staff training, regular crowd gate maintenance, and proper management are essential for ensuring successful crowd gate operation. While crowd gates help keep cows near the parlor entrance, it is crucial to avoid misusing them to promote positive animal welfare.

The top three mistakes observed in the use of crowd gates and management of holding areas include:

- Overcrowding the holding area
- Careless use of the crowd gate
- Workers entering the holding area to chase cows

Common mistake: overcrowding the holding area:

Trying to fit too many cows into a limited space for extended periods can be detrimental to the animals' welfare, production and health. In the holding area, cows are standing on concrete, away from feed, water, and comfortable stalls.

Signs of an overcrowded holding pen include cows with their heads up, unable to plant their four feet on the ground, and looking restless and uncomfortable. Short-term overcrowding can also result from misuse of the crowd gate, by employees pushing it too far forward and smashing the cows.

Overcrowding can become particularly uncomfortable during the summer months. Cows generate a lot of body heat, and they need air flow around them to dissipate that heat. In hot weather, a lot of cow bodies close together exacerbates heat stress and discomfort.

Best practice: minimize stress and discomfort

Maintaining appropriate stocking densities in holding areas is crucial for cow welfare. Parlor and pen sizes should be balanced to ensure cows spend no more than 1 hour away from their pens per each milking. Recommended stocking density per cow in the holding area is at least 20 square feet (1.9 sqm).

If necessary, a large pen can be split into two smaller groups. While this increases the number of trips workers need to make to the parlor, it reduces the time cows spend in the holding pen. Additionally, short-term overcrowding can be minimized by moving the crowd gate backward to allow more space for the cows.

To mitigate heat stress, holding pens should be shaded and well ventilated. Enhancing natural ventilation or installing mechanical ventilation, along with sprinkler systems, can further increase evaporative cooling from the cows.

Dairy record keeping not only benefits the farmer but the cows as well to better understand the herd as a whole and individual cows. Farmers can keep better data and records on cows, calves, heifers and even bulls to improve herd health, genetics, and milk production.
